U.S. DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE

Re: Uncoated Groundwood Paper from Canada, Inv. Nos. C-122-862 and A-122-861

Dear Secretary Ross:

We write to share the concerns of our constituents and others regarding the antidumping duty and countervailing duty investigations of imports of uncoated groundwood paper from Canada initiated by the Department of Commerce on August 30, 2017. As their enclosed letter indicates, the outcome of these investigations could have broad implications for the print industry, particularly with regard to small and local companies.

As you know, many Americans rely on print media to stay informed about local and national news. If duties are imposed on groundwood paper, newsprint companies may be forced to raise the prices of their products, ultimately putting the burden onto subscribers. It is critical that these papers remain affordable to the people who depend on these publications, particularly those in rural and underserved areas who may not have access to the Internet.

As such, we ask the Department of Commerce to examine all antidumping and countervailing duty petitions closely and fairly.

Thank you in advance for your attention to this matter, and we look forward to your response.

Sincerely,

Jack Reed
United States Senator

Sheldon Whitehouse

Re: Uncoated Groundwood Paper from Canada, Inv. Nos. C-122-862 and A-122-861

Dear Secretary Ross:

On behalf of the thousands of employees working at the more than 1,100 newspapers that we publish in cities and towns across the United States, we urge you to heavily scrutinize the antidumping and countervailing duty petitions filed by North Pacific Paper Company (NORPAC) regarding uncoated groundwood paper from Canada, the paper used in newspaper production. We believe that these cases do not warrant the imposition of duties, which would have a very severe impact on our industry and many communities across the United States. NORPAC's petitions are based on incorrect assessments of a changing market, and appear to be driven by the short-term investment strategies of the company's hedge fund owners. The stated objectives of the petitions are flatly inconsistent with the views of the broader paper industry in the United States.

The print newspaper industry has experienced an unprecedented decline for more than a decade as readers switch to digital media. Print subscriptions have declined more than 30 percent in the last ten years. Although newspapers have successfully increased digital readership, online advertising has proven to be much less lucrative than print advertising. As a result, newspapers have struggled to replace print revenue with online revenue, and print advertising continues to be the primary revenue source for local journalism.

If Canadian imports of uncoated groundwood paper are subject to duties, prices in the whole newsprint market will be shocked and our supply chains will suffer. Some paper manufacturers see the pending tariffs as a harbinger for further declines in the newsprint market and have indicated that they will convert operations to manufacture more profitable paper products. With fewer producers of newsprint, newspapers would face even higher costs or a disruption in supply of this critical raw material.

Facing increased costs of newsprint across all suppliers, many small-town papers will be at risk of failing. To survive, some newspapers may resort to increasing print subscription prices, which would only exacerbate the severe challenges facing print newspapers.

As to the U.S. paper industry, the industrywide shift from print newspapers to digital news consumption - not imports from Canada - has caused a decline in demand for uncoated groundwood paper. Conversely, in recent years, the market share of Canadian uncoated groundwood paper imports has actually declined.

Equally concerning, it appears that North Pacific's petitions may be driven by the economic strategies of the company's hedge fund owners, One Rock Capital Partners, which purchased NORPAC in November 2016. NORPAC's petitions do not reflect the views of the paper industry in the United States. In fact, the antidumping and countervailing duty petitions are opposed by other U.S. producers of newsprint and the American Forest and Paper Association, which represents the broader U.S. paper industry. Given the outlier status of NORPAC, it appears that One Rock Capital Partners may be using the petitions as a means of increasing the short-term value of this one mill, without any regard for the dramatic negative implications for U.S. newspapers in thousands of small cities and towns.

Local newspapers are the core of our communities' access to local news about governmental activity, local economic and business issues, high school sports, and milestones for local citizens. Our thousands of employees and millions of readers are counting on you to protect the industry from NORPAC's brazen attempt to manipulate the trade laws in a manner that would inflict widespread harm on the newspaper industry, without the support of others in the domestic paper industry.
